FREIGHT ELEVATOR DROPS AT THE FISHERIES BUREAU

Unable to Bear Heavy Load, It Crashes from Floor to Bottom of Shaft—Janitor Has a Thrilling Experience.

While being heavily loaded yesterday afternoon, a freight elevator at the Bureau of Fisheries, Sixth and B streets southwest, crashed from the third floor to the ground, almost taking with it William Payton, a colored janitor, who was loading the car.

Fifteen mail bags, weighing approximately eighty-five pounds each, and containing official publications, which were being transferred from the third to the ground floor, under the supervision of Allan E. Wilson, statistical agent, had been placed on the elevator and Payton was just wheeling a truckful of additional bags aboard, when the car gave away, dropping down the shaft with a noise that brought the employees in the building from the various rooms into the corridors in a high state of excitement. Feeling the elevator dropping beneath him, Payton applied all his strength in an effort to keep the truck and himself from being precipitated down the shaft.

Mrs. Elizabeth Eckert, by the will of her husband, Leonard Eckert, died yesterday, left his entire estate and is named executrix.

By the terms of the will of James H. Embury, dated June 12, 1905, his interest in oil land leases in Kentucky is left to his daughter, Mrs. Lewis E. Webster. The remaining estate is to be divided to his wife, Mrs. Eliza E. Embury, who is named executrix without bond.

Wants Divorce and Alimony.

A suit for divorce with alimony and custody of her child was yesterday filed by Mrs. Florence Root Foster against Horatio Abram Foster, civil engineer, who she says, has an annual income of $7,000. They were married in Chicago on December 12, 1898, and have one child, Mrs. Foster requests.

Attorneys Halston, Sweeney & Richardson represent the plaintiff.

with the car. For a moment he balanced himself upon the edge of the shaft and then he drew back in safety.

The elevator continued downward, jumping from notch to notch of the rack mechanism which operates it. The employees, after learning the cause of the commotion, hurried to the ground floor, thinking some one had been pinned beneath the car. Several women at the office for a moment bordered upon hysteria, but upon learning no one was injured, they were quickly calmed.

The elevator was recently inspected and was supplied with a safety catch device to prevent such accidents, but the appliance failed to work. Although emotions had been varied against riding on the car, they frequently violated the rule, and it is considered fortunate there was no violation of the regulation yesterday.

In spite of this precaution, the employees who load the elevator are compelled to enter the car in placing stores upon it, and this came near causing Payton to be seriously injured or killed.
